Profile

Student of the Department of Applied Informatics with a strong interest in the field of web development. I engage in designing and developing web applications, while continuously strengthening my knowledge of both front-end and back-end technologies. I aim to gain hands-on experience through practical application and participation in projects that promote innovation and efficiency in the field of information technology.

Work Experience

Despite not having professional experience in the field of computer science, my work experience in the food service industry has helped me develop skills such as teamwork, effective communication, and problem-solving. I intend to apply and further strengthen these skills in the field of information technology.
